Blitzing the Neighbourhood!

In the transition to a sustainable world, how can permaculture designers and activists work with communities to bring about effective change at the Neighbourhood scale?

Gavin Hardy, a Brisbane-based landscape architect and permaculture designer, recently completed the Whole Farm Plan for Northey Street City Farm by working with the local community over a five year period. Gavin shares his insights into larger scale community design, including what permaculturalists can offer, the traps and pitfalls, and the skill sets required.
